Who is it for?

Those wishing to obtain a formal asbestos surveying qualification.

Aims:

To provide the practical know-how and skills for those wishing to undertake buildings surveys. MDHS100 is the definitive reference for asbestos in buildings surveys, and this proficiency level course provides would-be surveyors with the underpinning knowledge to comply with it.

Assessment:

The candidate is assessed on their practical competence during the course which culminates in a 1hr 15 minute exam on the final day. The exam is set and administered by BOHS and, subject to successful completion of the exam and meeting further requirements of submission of two Type 2 or Type 3 surveys, leads to the attainment of the P402 certificate.

Course Content:

The course contains both practical and theoretical training to enable the candidate to undertake the final examination. The modules covered are;

- Legislation
- Asbestos in buildings
- Types and uses of asbestos in buildings
- Management of asbestos in buildings
- Bulk sampling
- Examination and practical assessment

“Put across at a good pace and way to understand especially as not from asbestos background, increased my knowledge.”
Pete Collins

“The trainer was very experienced which made all the difference! Course was pitched at a good pace with lots examples which made the content a lot clearer. Venue was ok, but the facilities could be better (esp food!).”
C Smith

“Instructor demonstrated extensive knowledge of subject, delivery of information was given in a way that made sense. Very good presentation and attitude.”
J Baker

“Very informative, friendly and relaxed atmosphere, Shaun led the course well and made it seem easy and the few jokes lightened the mood.”
Nichol Morgan
